UNIDEA is a formative moment, proposed for the first time during the International Antiracist Meeting last year. It aims to analyse racism in its multiple forms and expressions. It addresses to those who – students, social operators, volunteers – want to get an in-depth knowledge of racism, its birth, structures and mechanisms, as a complex system of ideas, speeches, actions and social behaviours.

UNIDEA is developed as a series of lessons – held by experts, teachers and non-experts – followed by discussions and workshops, in this way it aims to actively involve the participants.
